

I want to live my life in the solution and to help others find the solution

To build healthy communities, places, and environments where everyone can thrive

To not just complain but to do something about it to make it better

Because I understand the power of what we do, and my life is built on helping others.

Because I love God, love people, and choose joy – I want to impact a bigger change

I want to be a vision of hope

To be the hope that we do recover and to help end stigma surrounding this disease

To impact the lives of others

To leave the world better than when I came in

To help people understand that good people struggle with addiction, and everyone deserves a chance at their best life.

To be the change I wish to see in the world

MY WHY

To do everything in my power to help others going through times of woe

To be an advocate

I truly see that we make a difference

To make sure effective treatment is available for when those struggling with SUD make the decision to go to treatment

To remove the barriers for people seeking help

To be an example that long-term recovery is not only possible, but with the right resources is the expected outcome

To encourage individuals to reach their full potential
